Introduction

Francis Goddard was baptised at Aylestone, Leicestershire on 23 September 1632, a child of Robert & Mary Goddard of Little Glen. The children of Francis and his wife Sarah include Sarah Goddard who married Francis Dalby in 1709, a couple with many well-documented descendants currently living.

This article focuses on Francis Goddard's life, his descent from the Goddard family and his children.

Thank you to:

- The National Archives and the Record Office for Leicestershire, Leicester and Rutland for conserving and making accessible a vast range of original records.
- Internet Archive, FamilySearch and Cambridge University Library for making freely available online digitised versions of books, maps, newspapers and other resources.

When transcribing documents, obvious abbreviations have been silently expanded. Otherwise, the original spellings are kept and, where this is likely to assist navigation and understanding, long flowing text has been arranged into paragraphs. Except in direct quotations, the family surname is written here as 'Goddard' and the settlement where they lived as 'Glen Parva'.

Francis Goddard was my 8x great grandfather. The chart after Appendix F sets out his connection with Francis Dalby, a descendant whose own biography has already been published.[3]

Aylestone and Glen Parva

Aylestone is an ancient parish. The church, dedicated to St Andrew, is situated three miles south of Leicester Marketplace. A Grade II* listed building, the structure is described in some detail on the Historic England site.[4]

St Andrew Aylestone[5]

Until the latter part of the 19th century, most houses in the parish of Aylestone were close to the church with another settlement about two miles to the south at Glen Parva, near to the river Sence which marks the parish boundary with Blaby. Aylestone parish register survives from 1561 but at times the entries are disorderly; they are entirely missing for some years. The manor of Aylestone and most of the land in the parish were sold in 1869, since when it, including Glen Parva, has been built upon as a suburb of the City of Leicester.

The earliest census with precise figures for the whole population was held in 1801, when a total of 649 people was reported in the parish of Aylestone. Earlier indications include:

- The 1664 hearth tax lists recorded 44 households at Aylestone and 14 at Glen Parva.[6]
- The Compton Census of 1676 reported Aylestone as having 189 people over the age of 16 who conformed to the Church of England and no papists or nonconformists. No separate list for Glen Parva has been found, so that figure probably included the people who lived at Glen Parva too.[7]

Robert Goddard & Mary Bennett – parents

Aylestone parish register records the marriage on 5 February 1630/1 of 'Robert Goddard and Mary Bennett'.

Origins of Robert Goddard

The only references in the Aylestone register before 1630 are these marriages:

- 1593 Robt Goddard & Catherine Stretton 6 October[11]
- 1596 Robt Goddard & Anne Pawmer 22 May

The parish register of Enderby, a parish immediately to the west of Aylestone, extends back to 1559 and includes these baptisms (without corresponding infant burials):

- 1599 Robert Goddard the sonne of Robert Goddard [exact date not recorded]
- 1603/4 Robard Goddard 11 March [parents not recorded]

and also this marriage:

- 1583 Robert Godert & Amy White 4 November

It is likely that one or more of the events listed above relate to Mary Bennett's husband and/or his parents.

Origins of Mary Bennett

It is probable that Mary Bennet who married Robert Goddard was one of these two children whose christenings are recorded in Aylestone parish register:

- 2 June 1612: Mary Benet daughter of Frances Benet by the glen.
- 15 January 1614/1615: Mary Benet daughter of John Benet

Numerous references to the surname Bennett can be found in the same register extending back to 1561, which is the first year for which it survives. There is much scope for research into the history of that family with potential for clarifying Mary's parentage. The earliest of the probate records of the family at Aylestone is the will of William Bennet which was proved at Leicester Archdeaconry Court in 1517.

Three children of Robert and Mary Goddard of Little Glen were baptised at Aylestone:

Name	Baptised	Married	Buried
Francis	1632	Sarah	1706/7 Aylestone
Robert	1635
Joseph	1635/6

The modest number of children in the family suggests their mother died young. Aylestone parish register includes the burial on 20 September 1640 of 'Mary the wife of Thomas Godard of Little Glen labourer'. It is probable that the word 'Thomas' in this record was a mistake for 'Robert', as no other record has been found in the register of a person with the name Thomas Goddard.

In May 1641 Parliament urged all men over the age of 18 to swear a detailed oath of allegiance to the Protestant religion, to the King and to Parliament. Pressure to do so increased in February 1641/2, as can be seen in lists preserved in Aylestone parish register. 'Robert Godard' was one of the 84 members of the congregation whom the vicar of Aylestone recorded in August 1641 as making the declaration along with him in August 1641. Further lists with a total of 28 names were added there in the following February but do not include anyone with the Goddard surname.

In 1664, Robert Goddard was liable to pay tax for two hearths at Glen Parva.[12]

The burial of 'Robert Goddard of Little Glenn' took place at Aylestone on 22 September 1674. No record has been found of him leaving a will or of administration being granted for his estate.

Francis Goddard

'Francis Goddard son of Rob & Mary Goddard of Lytle Glenn' was baptised at Aylestone on 23 September 1632.

His marriage to Sarah has not been found and her origins are not known. The couple are recorded as the parents of these children:

Name	Baptised/born*	Married	Buried
Elizabeth		William Halford c.1694	1719 Blaby
William	1675/6	n/a	1685 Aylestone
Joseph	1678	n/a	1716/7 Aylestone
Sarah	c.1678*	Francis Dalby 1709	1742/3 Aylestone
Mary	1681/2	William Holmes 1718 Joseph White 1732	1738 Wigston Magna

The earliest baptism found for any of the children of Francis and Sarah took place in 1675/6 when he was about 39 years old. It is likely that their daughter Elizabeth, whose oldest child was baptised in 1696, was born before 1675 though probably not many years earlier. Therefore, there is a long period during which Francis and Sarah may have had other children and/or Francis may have had a previous marriage.

Sarah Goddard was evidently still alive on 22 January 1681/1682 when 'Mary ye daughter of Francis & Sarah Goddard of Little Glen' was christened at Aylestone. The will that Francis Goddard made on 19 April 1699 mentioned his daughters Elizabeth, Sarah and Mary, his son Joseph and a grandson but not a wife, which implies that Sarah had died by then. Aylestone parish register does not record the burial of Sarah Goddard during the period between Mary's baptism and Francis' will but does include the burial on 11 October 1688 of 'Anne ye wife of Francis Goddard of Little Glenn'. There is no doubt that 'Anne' was a mistake for 'Sarah'.

'Francis Goddard of Little Glen' was buried at Aylestone in 19 February 1706/7. The texts of his will and of the inventory of his goods and chattels compiled in connection with probate at Leicester Archdeaconry Court are set out in Appendixes A and B respectively.

Elizabeth Goddard – daughter

No record has been found of Elizabeth's birth or baptism, but the identity of her father is clear. In his will, Francis Goddard referred to his disposal of a cottage and land at Blaby to William Halford 'as a portion for my daughter Elizabeth whom he lately has married'. No other record has been found of William and Elizabeth's marriage but presumably it took place before the baptism of the first of their children, who were as follows:

Name	Baptised	Married	Buried
William	1696 Aylestone		1723 Blaby[13]
Sarah	1699 Blaby	Thomas Horton 1733
Elizabeth	1701 Blaby	John Vann 1725
Francis	1703 Blaby	Anne Sharp 1740	1751/2 Leicester St Mary de Castro

Blaby parish register records the burial on 20 July 1719 of 'Elizabeth wife of William Halford of Glen'.

Blaby parish register records the burial on 2 January 1733/1734 of 'Wm. Halford'.
On 3 February 1734/1735 administration was granted to Francis Halford of the Borough of Leicester, the eldest son and lawful administrator of the goods and chattels of William Halford of Little Glen lately deceased, for the father's estate.

[13] The texts of his will can be seen in Appendix D.

Joseph Goddard – son

Aylestone parish register records the baptism on 30 November 1678 of 'Joseph ye son of Francis & Sarah Goddard of Little Glen'. 'Joseph Goddard of Little Glen' was buried at Aylestone on 4 January 1716/7. 13 days after his funeral, administration of his estate was granted to Mary Goddard. She and William Halford of Little Glen provided the associated bond which describes her as daughter of Joseph Goddard. However, the inventory described Joseph as a bachelor and there is no evidence of him having ever married or having children. Both Mary and William made their marks on the bond and would not have been able to read the evident mistake about her relationship to Joseph; she was actually his sister.

The inventory of Joseph's estate was appraised by Mr Foxton and Michale Simons. Its text is set out in Appendix C.

Sarah Goddard – daughter

No record of Sarah Goddard's baptism has been found either at Aylestone or at any other Leicestershire parish included in the index compiled by FindMyPast index to its scans of parish registers for the county. However, the will that Francis Goddard of Little Glen made in 1699 appointed his daughter Sarah Goddard as an executrix and one of the residual legatees. The approximate ago recorded when her marriage licence was applied for indicates that Sarah was born about 1678.

On 14 May 1709, a licence was granted for the marriage of Francis Dalby, widower of South Croxton, and Sarah Goddard of Little Glen, aged 30 years or thereabouts. The union was solemnised at Aylestone on 19 May 1709. It is not clear from the wording of the relevant document whether the approximate age related just to Sarah or to both of them but it does correspond nicely with the date of 7 September 1679 on which Francis had been baptised at Skeffington. His first marriage, to Sarah Edwin (1680-1708), produced two children, only one of whom – a son named John – was still living at the time of his father's second marriage.

Francis and Sarah Dalby initially lived at South Croxton (about 13 miles from Glen Parva) and it was there that three of their children were baptised:

Name	Baptised	Married	Buried
Sarah	1711	n/a	1711 South Croxton
Francis	1712/3	Theophila Halford 1739	1760 Osgathorpe
Sarah	1714	James Sutton 1739	1746 Aylestone

Baptism records have not been found for all of Francis and Sarah's children. There were at least two others:

- Thomas - One further son can be positively identified. Thomas Dalby and his wife Mary had four children baptised at Aylestone or Blaby between 1743 and 1751. Thomas' will, made in 1752, includes his cottage at Glen Parva 'which descended to me on the death of my late father Francis Dalby deceased'. The will of Thomas' brother Francis which was made in 1759 bequeathed to Thomas all his wearing

This work is openly licenced via CC BY-NC-SA 4.0.
https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/4.0/apparel. It is from Thomas' son, Francis (1749-1813) that a host of Dalbys living in the Blaby area from then until the present day derive their surname.

- Ann - It is very likely that Ann Dolby who married John Licorish at Blaby on 23 February 1734/5 was also a child of Francis and Sarah as no record has been found of another Dalby couple at Aylestone, Glen Parva or Blaby in that era.

Francis Dalby was buried at Aylestone from Glen Parva on 9 July 1741. 'Sarah Dolby Widow of Little Glen' followed him to the grave there on 4 January 1742/3.

Mary Goddard – daughter

Aylestone parish register records the baptism on 22 January 1681/2 of 'Mary ye daughter of Francis & Sarah Goddard of Little Glen'. The will that Francis Goddard of Little Glen made in 1699 appointed his daughter Mary Goddard as an executrix and one of the residual legatees.

On 1 April 1718, William Holmes of Wigston Magna & Mary Godard of Little Glen were married at Aylestone by licence. The licence had been issued seven days earlier; the associated allegation stated that William Holmes, a framework knitter, was a bachelor of Wigston Magna aged 50 years or thereabouts and Mary Goddard of Little Glen a singlewoman aged 37 years or thereabouts. William made his mark in the form of the letter 'H'.

The couple appear to have had only one child – 'Wm ye son of Wm Holms' who was baptised at Wigston Magna on 19 January 1718/9.

Great Wigston parish register records the burial on 23 September 1726 of 'Wm Holmes'. The texts of his will and inventory are set out in Appendixes E and F respectively.

Mary's second marriage also took place at Great Wigston, where the parish register records the wedding on 27 April 1732 of 'Joseph White of Sutton in the parish of Broughton & Mary Holmes of Little Glenn'. The marriage lasted for only just over six years, as Wigston Magna parish register also records the burial on 15 September 1738 of 'Mary wife of Joseph White'.
